The purpose of the Annual Review of the Sociology of Religion (ARSR) is to investigate the "new" role of religion in the contemporary world, which is more and more characterized by cultural pluralism and by religious individualism.

Volume 9: The Changing Faces of Catholicism

Edited by Solange Lefebvre and Alfonso Pérez-Agote

Catholicism represents an important area of research in sociology as well as across a number of disciplines. As literature on Catholicism in certain contexts substantially expands, there still remains the need for recent qualitative and quantitative data in specific national contexts via a comparative perspective. In the discussion on secularism and diversity, there exist open questions on the way culture, heritage, and religion intersect or differentiate (political regulation of diversity). Law, education, religious heritage, chaplaincies, collaborations between state and civil society—these are just a few areas of social life where these dimensions are rapidly changing. The relation between Catholicism and the media poses a number of questions as well.

To explore these issues we propose to include articles around the following themes:

1. Catholicism and culture
2. Catholicism and media
3. Catholicism and international relations
4. Transnational practices, movements, and popular religion
5. Catholicism, gender, sexuality, and biopolitics
6. Catholicism, public policies, and institutions
7. Catholicism and other religions

The editors will seek out contributors who can address questions raised in the sociology of religion about Catholicism with authors representing regional and cultural variation. Please send all proposals (300 words) to solange.lefebvre@umontreal.ca

Deadline Submission of Proposals: June 30, 2016
