

The International Research Group

“Bilderfahrzeuge: Aby Warburg’s Legacy and the Future of Iconology”

supported by the German Bundesministerium für Bildung und Forschung invites applications for several full-time research posts (in principle post-doctoral) based at the Warburg Institute in London, the Warburg-Haus in Hamburg and at the Humboldt Universität zu Berlin for up to five years from July 2018 or as soon as possible thereafter.

The objective of this project is to explore the migration of images, objects, and ideas in a broad historical and geographical perspective. In particular, it seeks to provide a contribution to the history of images which is based on Aby Warburg’s approach and method, rethinking them in the light of new interdisciplinary, international scholarship. The project will reconstruct and develop a rich scholarly approach which addresses the distinctiveness of images while also studying the language in which ideas about transfers between cultures and ideas about images are expressed. A focus also lies on the political impact of global visual culture.

Research staff in London, Berlin and Hamburg will conduct their own research, while contributing to the collective work and larger projects. We are particularly interested in applicants with a high level of research skills in art history, transfer phenomena between Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas, in anthropology, the history of science and comparative literature. Applicants will be expected to have a good knowledge of the languages relevant to their field of study and a good speaking and reading knowledge of English and a second language, preferably German.

Post-holders in London will be employed by the Max Weber-Stiftung, at the Warburg-Haus by the University of Hamburg, in Berlin by the Humboldt Universität zu Berlin and the Max-Planck-Institut. Salaries are calculated based on the German government research scale and determined by skills and experience.

All participating institutions are committed to increasing the number of women in academic posts and would therefore particularly welcome applications from women. Where there is a choice between equally qualified male and female applicants, a female applicant will be chosen.

Applications should indicate the alphabetic character of the respective post, include a letter of application with a specific research proposal and indicating candidates' interests in and suitability for the projects of the research group, a curriculum vitae and publications list, the names of three referees and a writing sample of around 5,000 words of published or unpublished research. Completed applications (electronic submissions only) must be submitted by Monday 30th April 2018.

Interviews will be held in Berlin and London in June or July 2018.
